THE WALT ALSTON STORY

...thirty years a pilot

WALTER EMMONS ALSTON is in his 30th season as the manager of a professional baseball team. At age 58, he has spent half of his life as a baseball manager.

Walt Alston's first managerial assignment was with Portsmouth in 1940 and he worked 13 seasons in the minor leagues learning his trade. He managed teams at Portsmouth, Springfield, Trenton, Nashua, Pueblo, St. Paul and Montreal before his opportunity came to manage the Dodgers in 1954.

Walt Alston has made the most of that opportunity.

Launching his 17th season as the manager of the Dodgers, Alston has moved into the top ranks in almost any manner one cares to examine major league managers.

Alston has managed four world championship teams — Dodger clubs in 1955, 1959, 1963 and 1965 — and only three managers have claimed more world titles: Casey Stengel, Joe McCarthy and Connie Mack. Stengel and McCarthy each piloted seven world champion teams and Mack five.

Alston has managed six pennant-winning teams for the Dodgers, tying him for fifth place with Miller Huggins for pennants won. Stengel and John McGraw each managed 10 pennant-winning teams and Mack and McCarthy nine.

In winning 6 pennants in 16 seasons, Alston is tied for second place with McCarthy on the list evaluating pennants won in terms of years managed. Only Stengel rates ahead of him.

In addition to his six pennant-winning and four world championship teams Alston has been successful in All-Star competition and his over-all record against the American League is 25 wins, 18 losses.

Alston's long term with the Dodgers is noteworthy. Only four men in the history of major league baseball have managed one club for a longer period — Connie Mack, 50 years with the Philadelphia Athletics (1901-50), McGraw, 31 years with the New York Giants (1902-32), Cap Anson, 19 years with the Chicago Cubs (1879-1897), and Wilbert Robinson, 18 years with the Dodgers (1914-31).

There are only 14 men in the history of the major leagues who have managed for more seasons than Alston. And this year he will tie Miller Huggins on that list.

Walt Alston batted only one time in the major leagues and that was in his second season — 1936. It took him 14 years to reach the majors again and he didn't miss on that second opportunity.

The Skipper's Aides...

JIM GILLIAM (born Oct. 17, 1928) looks like he could still go out and play for the Dodgers and he admits that scares him a little bit. "Look, there's no way I could play now," Jim explained last season when someone mentioned that Junior looked ready for action. The Dodgers brought Junior back from retirement as a player in 1965 and again in 1966—winning pennants both years—but his contributions now are made strictly from the sidelines. And they are important contributions with a large cast of young players. Jim played 14 seasons for the Dodgers and in half of those years the club won National League pennants. In his first season with the Dodgers, Jim played 151 games and won "Rookie of the Year" honors. This year the Dodgers had another second baseman to win "Rookie of the Year" honors—Ted Sizemore. "Junior did a lot to help me," said Ted. Jim Gilliam is still making key contributions for the Dodgers.

DANNY OZARK (born Nov. 26, 1924) has been with the Dodger organization since 1942 when he started his playing career with Olean of the Pony League. A standout first baseman in the minors, Danny played for Dodger farm teams at Olean, Abilene, Fort Worth, St. Paul, Newport News, Elmira, Cedar Rapids, Wichita Falls, Macon and Omaha. He launched his career as a minor league manager in 1956 with Wichita Falls and spent nine seasons as a manager prior to joining the Dodger coaching staff in 1965. After his first season as a player Ozark spent three years of service in World War II and during this time he won five battle stars and the Purple Heart. Danny participated in the Battle of Omaha and the Battle of the Bulge and suffered fragmentation wounds in both legs. In 1949 Danny filled out a Brooklyn Dodger questionnaire and was asked his plans for the future. He replied "becoming a manager."

ROY HARTSFIELD (born Oct. 25, 1925) joined the Dodger coaching staff last season after compiling an outstanding record as a minor league manager. In his final four years as a pilot in the Dodger organization, Roy's club won three championships. Hartsfield spent three seasons, 1950-52, with the old Boston Braves in the National League and finished his full-time playing career with Los Angeles in the Pacific Coast League in 1957. One of his teammates on that Angel club was Red Adams who, like Roy, joined the Dodger coaching staff last season. Hartsfield began his career as manager in 1958 and made five stops—including stints in the Alabama-Florida, South Atlantic, Florida State and Texas Leagues—before arriving at Spokane in 1966. Roy gave Spokane its first back-to-back titles by piloting the Indians to crowns in 1967 and 1968. Roy joined the Dodger organization in 1952 in the deal which sent Andy Pafko to Boston. It's a deal which still is paying dividends for the Dodgers.

★ ★ ★

RED ADAMS (born Oct. 7, 1921) proved to be a popular and productive member of the Dodger coaching staff last season. The Dodger players admire Red for his good nature and ability to keep a club loose. The pitchers respect Red for his ability as a pitching coach. Claude Osteen, Bill Singer and Don Sutton—the Dodgers' "Big Three"—all won more games than before last season. All gave a great deal of credit to Red who was serving his first year as a Dodger coach after being employed as a scout by the club since 1959. "Red is a great instructor," says Singer, "and he has the ability to spot a flaw when things aren't going right." A veteran of 20 seasons as a player, Red spent most of his career in the Pacific Coast League and was well known in Los Angeles circles. Red had a 2.17 earned run average with the Los Angeles Angeles in 1952 and a 2.05 figure three years later. He was voted the most valuable player with 21 victories—and a .349 batting average—in 1945.

★ ★ ★

CARROLL BERINGER (born Aug. 14, 1928) spent 13 seasons in the minor leagues, hoping for an opportunity to wear a Dodger uniform. As a player that dream never was fulfilled. Carroll Beringer, however, has become a Dodger and a very important one. He's the man they call "C.B." and he's ready to accept any assignment in his dual role as a batting practice pitcher and bullpen coach. He loves the game and his enthusiasm is an encouragement to everyone on the club. C.B.'s best season as a player was in 1959 when he led the Texas League with 19 victories and was rewarded by being named the top pitcher in the league. In 1961 he joined the Dodgers as a batting practice pitcher and in 1967 he was named a full-fledged member of the coaching staff. C.B. is where he always wanted to be—in the major leagues—and he's a major leaguer in every way.

Your Dodgers of 1970

DOYLE ALEXANDER — (Gabby) — The Dodgers were pleased with Doyle Alexander's ability to get the job done last season. In his second year of professional baseball Alexander opened the season with Daytona Beach and completed 12 of his 25 starts while compiling a 2.72 earned run average and a 13-9 record. Alexander finished the season at Albuquerque and completed one of three starts although he wasn't involved in a decision. "Doyle is a soft-spoken young man but he's a bulldog on the mound," says former major league pitcher Bob Shaw, who managed Alexander at Daytona Beach last year. Alexander is 6-3, weighs 190 pounds, and it's his lively fastball which has pleased the Dodger brass. Doyle is a native of Alabama and the Dodgers have plucked a couple of stars who are 'Bama natives — namely Don Sutton and Ted Sizemore. Alexander reminded one Dodger scout of Roger Craig and this comparison is just one of many encouraging reports on him.

DICK ARMSTRONG — With six seasons of minor league experience behind him, 25-year-old Dick Armstrong is prepared for the challenge to make the Dodger club this season. Armstrong started the 1969 season as a relief pitcher for Spokane but he was summoned out of the bullpen at mid-season and did a good job as a starter, finishing with a 6-5 record. A graduate of California State at Los Angeles, Armstrong has flashed outstanding potential throughout his baseball career. Pitching for Cal State in 1964, he struck out 104 batters for the third highest mark in the country among NCAA schools. In 1966 he led the California League in strikeouts, 186 in 207 innings. And in 1968 Armstrong pitched a no-hitter for Albuquerque, the first for that team since Jose Santiago recorded one in 1960. A consistent report on Armstrong is that he "keeps working hard to improve." The payoff may be near for Dick Armstrong.

JIM BREWER — (Brew or Fireball) — Paul Richards, boss of the Braves, called Jim Brewer's May 3 performance against Atlanta "the finest relief job" he had ever seen. Unfortunately for Jim, his effort resulted in a defeat — his first of 1969. Jim had entered the game with the Dodgers leading, 5 to 4. He made twenty-five pitches and only one was out of the strike zone. He fanned four of the first six batters he faced. An error put a runner on base in the ninth and, after two outs, Clete Boyer lofted a fly ball a few feet over the left field fence and the Dodgers lost, 6 to 5. Brewer didn't suffer another defeat until July 11 by which time he had won three and saved thirteen games. Jim battled a nagging backache until he was hospitalized in late August. Put in traction, he said he felt seven feet tall when he came back to the club and he pitched that way, too — allowing only two runs in his last eleven relief chores to close with a career high of twenty saves and an ERA of 2.56, his fifth at three runs per game or better in six Dodger campaigns.

BILL BUCKNER — (Billy Buck) — At age 20, Buckner is one of the brightest hitting prospects in the Dodger organization. He has played only two seasons but he batted .344 at Ogden, .307 at Albuquerque and .315 at Spokane. He has batted once for the Dodgers as Walt Alston showed his confidence in the youngster by inserting him as a pinch-hitter in a late season game with the Giants. At Napa High School, Buckner batted .667 as a junior and .529 as a senior. His top honors came in football, however, as he was voted to the Coaches' All-America team in his junior and senior years and also was named to the Northern California Football Hall of Fame. He continued to win honors in pro baseball, being named to the Western All-Star team in his first year at Ogden. When Buckner signed with the Dodgers he noted on a publicity form "I'm happy to be a Dodger." The feeling is mutual.

RON CEY — In his first year of pro baseball at Tri-City in 1968 Ron Cey batted .299 and commented "I felt like I was in an awful slump." Cey had batted .362 as a sophomore at Washington State University prior to signing with the Dodgers. Last season Cey gave an encouraging performance at Bakersfield as he batted .331 and hit 22 home runs with 56 runs batted in. A third baseman, Cey has excellent hands and an accurate right arm. Cey received solid instruction last season from an ex-Dodger third baseman — Bakersfield skipper Don LeJohn. "This young man has shown he can pull the ball but we want him to concentrate on hitting to all fields," says Dodger batting instructor Dixie Walker.

WILLIE CRAWFORD — Only one Dodger drove in more game-winning runs than Willie Crawford during a highly encouraging season for this powerful prospect for future stardom. A $100,000 bonus player, Willie saw more action with the Dodgers in 1969 than he had in five previous "broken" seasons with the club. Willie followed his year by playing in the Caribbean during the Winter and he was one of the leading hitters in Winter ball until called home by illness in his family. Willie was one of Dixie Walker's more productive hitting students in '69 and batted home the "key" run in eleven games, one behind Wes Parker's pace-setting dozen. He was one of four Dodgers who hit homers in the same game (April 16 vs Padres) for a club record in Dodger Stadium. A month later he broke up a game with the Pirates with a two-run blast which capped a ninth-inning come-from-behind effort against the Pirates. The pitcher Crawford hits best is one who is "cousin" to few National League batters — guy named Bob Gibson. Cutting down on strikeouts is Willie's greatest aim in 1970. He fanned 64 times in 238 times at bat in 1968 and 85 times in 389 appearances last year. The ratio was down but Willie and the Dodgers want it improved this season.

WILLIE DAVIS — (3-Dog) — There were times during the 1969 season when Willie Davis must have felt like a clay pigeon. He suffered a broken arm when hit by Claude Raymond in Spring training. His cheek was smashed by Dan McGinn in June and Juan Marichal decked him with a pitch behind his right ear in July. It wasn't too long after that Willie, following an 0-for-6 night in Pittsburgh, talked of retirement and the thought he might join the pro golfing tour in 1970. But a strange thing happened to him on the way to the links. He hit in thirty-one consecutive games for an all-time Dodger record and the third-best National League streak. Suddenly Willie found his name associated with Joe Dimaggio, Rogers Hornsby, Stan Musial, Tommy Holmes, George Sisler, Ty Cobb and other streaksmiths of the past. Willie's consecutive-game fling was the result of a change in batting style. "I hit a ball 400 feet in Pittsburgh and they catch it. Manny Mota chops one at the plate and he gets a hit," Willie said when he decided to forget about distance and go for hits. During his July 31-Sept. 3 string he batted .435 (54 hits in 124 times at bat) and he finished his season with a mark of .311, his career high. He was top-dog at Dodger Stadium with an average of .332. He has forgotten all about Arnie Palmer, Jack Nicklaus & Co. In 1970 he'll be bearing down on Pete Rose, Roberto Clemente and their like — not to mention the sharpshooting pitchers who made him a favorite target last Summer.

JOE FERGUSON — (Tarzan) — An outfielder when he arrived at Vero Beach last Spring, Joe Ferguson was converted to a catcher and he won All-Florida State honors while performing for Daytona Beach. In two seasons Ferguson has shown a promising and consistent bat as he hit .288 at Tri-City in 1968 and .286 at Daytona Beach last season. Ferguson was a member of Tommy Lasorda's "Porky Pig Club" during the Arizona Instruction League last winter and Joe dropped twenty-five pounds and now weighs in at 190. Ferguson was twice named the Most Valuable Player while performing in a collegiate league in Canada, 1965 and 1966. Born in San Francisco, Joe attended the University of Pacific and now resides in San Jose.

JIM FLYNN — (Flynnegan) — To the surprise of no one, Jim Flynn is Irish. He's a redhead and with that comes a competitive spirit. Flynn's third season in professional ball was his best as he won 13 games and lost 11 while pitching for Bakersfield last season. He recorded 188 strikeouts in 188 innings. Flynn is a switch-hitter and takes pride in his work with the bat. He says his biggest thrill in pro baseball was hitting a triple and two singles while playing for Tri-City in 1967. Flynn was signed by another redhead — Dodger pitching coach Red Adams. At Roosevelt High in Fresno Flynn was an all-around athlete. He participated in football, basketball, track and baseball. In 1966 at the Fresno Relays he high jumped 6-8 for a prep meet record. He took timeout from the major sports in high school to win the heavyweight boxing championship. Just to show his all-around sporting interest, Flynn lists hunting, pool, swimming and skiing as his hobbies. Flynn's father, Ed Flynn, pitched for Ogden in 1941 and 1942 and for Fresno of the California League in 1946.

ALAN FOSTER — (Double No-No) — This is the year Alan Foster will be offered ample opportunity to establish himself as a regular starter for the Dodgers. With Don Drysdale, Claude Osteen, Bill Singer and Don Sutton pitching in 1969 rotation, Foster was and in-and-out starter. He hurled two successive shutouts (June 13-17 versus the Mets and Padres) and then had to wait twelve days for his next assignment. It wasn't a schedule likely to put a man in a pitching groove. With Drysdale retired, Foster becomes the logical candidate for the No. 4 spot. A youngster who commanded a bonus close to six figures when signed in '65, Foster gained his "Double No-No" nickname when he hurled no-hit, no-run games against Seattle in successive games against that club in the 1967 Pacific Coast League campaign. The Autumn before he had impressed Walt Alston with some excellent pitching during the Dodger tour of Japan when he was a last-moment replacement for Don Sutton. A native of California, Alan starred at Los Altos High in baseball, football and basketball and fanned 188 batters in 99 innings. Dodger scouts led the pack on his trail.

LEN GABRIELSON — (Gabe) — Pinch-hitting is not a chore Len Gabrielson enjoys but he's mighty good at it. In 1968 Gabe hit .259 coming off the bench, cold, and in 1969 he became the best in the league in this department at .333, making twelve hits in thirty-six appearances as a sub swatter. He was batting .450 as a pinch hitter as late as mid-July but, despite this success, Len yearned for more regular work. Obtained from the California Angeles for John Werhas, Gabe had played earlier with three other major league organizations — the Braves, Cubs and Giants. Len led the Dodgers in home runs in 1968 with ten and had personal highs in several departments. After a great Spring he was caught in the Dodger youth movement and relegated to pinch-hitting duty. Nevertheless, he matched his 1968 batting average of .270. Len is a member of a baseball-playing family. His dad, Len, Sr., played in the Pacific Coast League and an uncle, Bill Matheson, was in the Yankee farm system. A younger brother, Doug, became Giants' property. A graduate of U.S.C., Len has been in the big leagues since 1963 but is still hoping to fulfill a goal — to play on a pennant-winning ball club. If he can achieve that in 1970, he'll even "enjoy" pinch hitting.

STEVE GARVEY — The Dodgers firmly believe they have produced an outstanding power-hitting prospect in Steve Garvey. That's because Steve Garvey has been so productive in two seasons of professional baseball. He has played 148 games for Ogden, Albuquerque and the Dodgers — and has driven in 144 runs. Not a bad ratio. Although Garvey batted .373 at Albuquerque last season and drove in 85 runs in 83 games he didn't win the battling title, falling short of enough at-bats to qualify. Garvey did win the praise of his manager, Del Crandall. "Steve has outstanding power," said Crandall. Garvey credited Crandall with teaching him to "stay in on a pitch." Steve was called up by the Dodgers when the Albuquerque season ended and the youngster had one hit in three at-bats. His hit came in the Astrodome. "I'm batting .1000 indoors," chirped Steve. Garvey started the season playing third for Albuquerque but finished as a first baseman. He received drilling at both positions this winter from Dodger scout Monty Basgall, who worked with Garvey in the fieldhouse at Michigan State where Steve was attending classes. As a sophomore at Michigan State, Steve was an All-America baseball player under Danny Litwhiler and also was a starting defensive halfback on the outstanding Spartan team which battled Notre Dame to a famed 10-all tie. The Minnesota Twins drafted Steve out of high school in 1966 but weren't able to sign him and thus Garvey was taken by the Dodgers in the secondary phase of the draft in 1968. Steve admitted a life-long love for the Dodgers. His father is a bus driver in Florida who has chauffeured the Dodgers on many trips in the Spring. Steve used to accompany his father and the Dodgers on some of the Spring trips and figures to be making many trips with the Dodgers in the years to come.

BILL GRABARKEWITZ — (Grabby or Billy G.) — One of the most courageous battles at Vero Beach last Spring was waged by Billy Grabarkewitz. Regarded as one of the brightest prospects in the Dodger organization, Billy was hampered by a broken ankle which he suffered in August of 1968. A speedster with 91 stolen bases to his credit in his first three seasons, Billy did his best to conceal his pain but his limp was obvious. After more than a year of prescribed workouts to bring the ankle back to normal, the word on Billy G. now is that he's regained 95 per cent of his speed. And at 95 per cent he's one of the fastest Dodgers. Billy recalls his 34 games last season with the Dodgers in frustrating terms but he showed plenty in 51 games at Spokane — driving in 22 runs, slugging 10 doubles, 2 triples, and 5 homers, stealing 10 bases and batting .264. Billy spent most of the winter in Arizona working at second base. And he usually was the first one to report to the Mesa field, running up and down the bleachers before each game to strengthen his ankle. When the Dodger club in Arizona found itself without a regular catcher one day skipper Tommy Lasorda called for volunteers. The guy raising his hand was Billy G. "Heck, I started out as a catcher in high school," said Billy. "No one else would get behind the plate. I only weigh 150 pounds and the equipment kind of weighed me down." But nothing seems to hold "Grabby" back, not even a broken ankle.

TOM HALLER — (Hatch) — A former University of Illinois quarterback, Tom Haller came to the Dodgers in one of the rare deals with their deadly rivals from San Francisco. The ex-Giant quickly proved the deal a good one when he won top honors among the Dodgers in 1968. He was their "Mr. Clutch" and the Long Beach Independent Press Telegram named him Dodger of the Year, an honor also awarded him by the Baseball Writers of Los Angeles at their annual banquet. In '68, Haller delivered more game-winning hits than any Dodger, hit .337 at Dodger Stadium and had a season mark of .285, thirty points higher than has career average. He also was the top-hitting catcher in the major leagues. His 1969 season was not comparable but Haller, nevertheless, caught in 147 games and only two National League receivers saw more action. He had the honor of catching two 20-game winners for the first time in Dodger history since the Sandy Koufax-Don Drysdale heyday. Haller's ability to hit left-handed pitching as well as right-handed keeps him in many a ball game. When, as aforementioned, Haller led the Dodgers at Dodger Stadium in 1968, he joined some rather celebrated Dodgers in home-park hitting. Since 1958, and including last year, the pace-setters have been, in order, Carl Furillo, Duke Snider, Frank Howard, Wally Moon, Tommy Davis (twice), John Roseboro, Lou Johnson, Willie Davis, Al Ferrara, Haller and Willie Davis (repeating).

WARREN JENKINS — (Jack) — "When I first heard the news I thought somebody was kidding me," recalls Jack Jenkins. "This is my big chance and I'm going to make the most of it." The news Jenkins received last September was that he had been purchased from the Washington Senators' Savannah club by the Dodgers. He worked only one inning for the Dodgers and came away with three quick outs. The Dodgers sent Jenkins to Arizona during the winter and he displayed a good fastball while making 15 pounds disappear. Signed to his first contract in 1961 by Washington scout George McQuinn, Jenkins has been with nine minor league clubs while receiving brief flings with the Senators in 1962 and 1963. Jenkins has been plagued by control problems during his career but he credits Hub Kittle with helping him last season. Jack says his biggest thrill in baseball was pitching to Mickey Mantle in 1962. The Dodgers hope there are bigger thrills ahead for Jack Jenkins.

PAUL JOHNSON — (High Pockets) — Speed has been a trademark of Dodger teams and it's also a trademark of Paul Johnson. He stole 64 bases at Daytona Beach last season and was thrown out only eight times. A native of Washington, D.C., Paul was signed by the Dodgers after he had batted .366 as a sophomore at South Carolina State College. The Dodgers were pleased with the progress Paul made as a defensive outfielder last season and during the Arizona Instructional League. A lefthanded batter, Paul hit .262 at Tri-City in 1968 and then improved that mark to .299 at Daytona Beach last season.

TIM JOHNSON — (Slick) — Dodger shortstop prospect Tim Johnson has stamped himself as a solid defensive performer and has shown improvement with the bat in two seasons. He hit .247 at Albuquerque last season, hiking his batting average 22 points in comparison with his first year at Bakersfield. A graduate of Montebello High School, Tim didn't play baseball in high school but showed his quick and agile moves in football and track (he high-jumped 6-4). Johnson did play summer baseball for the Monterey Park Firebirds and led his team to the state playoffs in the senior Connie Mack League on two occasions. A right-handed batter in Connie Mack competition, Johnson now is strictly a left-handed hitter.

VON JOSHUA — (Josh) — Von Joshua is a young man on the move. He started at Tri-City in 1967 and has advanced up the ladder to Santa Barbara, Albuquerque, Spokane and, at the end of last season, the Dodger varsity. The last stop was the one that pleased Von and he pleased Dodger skipper Walt Alston, too. After batting .277 and stealing 34 bases at Spokane, Joshua received a late-season call from the Dodgers and played in 14 games. He flashed his speed and defensive ability, making two sliding catches in one game at Dodger Stadium. "He appears to have all the tools," declared a happy Alston. Joshua has shown the ability to make good contact and his running speed enables him to produce extra-base hits as he showed last year with 21 doubles and 10 triples at Spokane. A stand-out baseball player at Castlemont High School and Laney Junior College in Oakland, Von originally was drafted by the San Francisco Giants but they were unsuccessful in negotiations and this made him subject to selection in the special phase of the June draft of 1967. Passed up by all 20 clubs in that draft, Von was signed by the Dodgers at a tryout camp. Von quickly made the Dodgers' move look brilliant by batting .363 in 66 games at Tri-City and .382 in 8 games at Santa Barbara in 1967.

ANDY KOSCO — (Clark Kent) — When the Dodgers sent southpaw pitcher Mike Kekich to the Yankees for Andy Kosco they got just what they were looking for — right-handed punch. Andy led the club in home runs, at 19, and runs batted in, at 74, and did some devastating clouting, particularly in the early months of the season. On April 15, he hit the first Dodger Stadium grand slam home run by a Dodger since Willie Davis socked one in September of 1964. His six runs batted in that day tied Los Angeles Dodger club records set by Frank Howard and Ron Fairly. Twice he had 5-RBI games and, over the season, he drove in three-or-more runs nine times. In August he had a five-game RBI-streak, driving in nine runs during the string. Originally the property of the Minnesota Twins, a club which sought his return during the interleague trading phase last Winter, Kosco went to the Yankees in 1968. The Dodgers are hoping he can put together two good half-seasons in 1970. He was a .263 hitter with fourteen of his home runs, before the All-Star Game. His .309 Sept. - Oct. average was inaugurated by a 4-for-4 day against the Mets. Kosco hit .280 at Dodger Stadium and smashed eight of his home runs there.

RAY LAMB — The Dodgers didn't get involved in heavy trading during the off-season but vice president Red Patterson proposed one deal just for laughs. "We're considering trading (Ray) Lamb to Pittsburgh," quipped Red. "That way the Pirates could offer Lamb, (Bob) Veale and (Bob) Moose." The Dodgers had no serious thoughts of trading Lamb. He was one of the pleasant surprises in the relief department, working in 10 games and compiling a 1.80 earned run average. Ray wasn't on the Dodgers' 40-man roster last Spring but he looked good in Florida and was on the Dodger team which headed West. He was sent to Spokane just before the N.L. season opened but was called up during the late Summer to bolster the Dodger bullpen. Lamb lost 15 pounds in Arizona during the winter of 1968 and he credits the weight reduction as a big factor in his improvement in 1969. Ray was born and still resides in Glendale. As a pitcher at Hoover High he developed late in his prep career and then came on strong and helped USC win conference titles in 1964 and 1966 prior to being signed by Dodger scout Ben Wade.

JIM LEFEBVRE — (Frenchy) — Down the stretch in 1969, Jim Lefebvre showed much of the form which won Dodger rookie and sophomore honors for him in championship seasons of 1965 and 1966. That is why Al Campanis, vice-president in charge of players, was reluctant to toss him into the several deals offered for his services in 1970. Frenchy hit .290 in September and October and when skipper Walt Alston started him at third base against the Padres September 14, he hit a double and homer, drove in three runs and won the ball game. Restricted by a sprained ankle early in the year, Lefebvre was hitting under .200 when Alston inserted him at third against the Mets and this time, as later, Jim responded with two hits, one winning the game, 1 to 0, behind Alan Foster's fine pitching. Called to military service in late July, Jim signalled his return with a three-run homer which beat the Cardinals August 12 but it was his stretch run which encouraged the Dodgers. His pinch double spiced a four-run inning against San Diego on September 13 and the next day he was back at third for regular duty.

ALVIN McBEAN — (Double-O) — Acquired early in the season from the San Diego Padres for Leon Everitt and Tommy Dean, Alvin McBean was a busy member of the Dodger bullpen brigade in 1969. McBean, a native of the Virgin Islands, went to the Padres from the Pirates in expansion maneuvers. He became a full-scale reliever in 1964 and enjoyed tremendous success. In fifty-eight games for Pittsburgh he won 8, lost 3, had eighteen saves and had an astounding 1.90 earned run average. Four times during his career he has been under three runs per game. When Don Drysdale retired late in the season there was some thought of starting McBean but the acquisition of Jim Bunning shelved that plan. Alvin likes to work fast — talks the same way. During the off-season McBean is busy in recreation work on his native island. There isn't a fancier dresser among the Dodgers than Alvin O'Neal McBean, also known as "Gay Blade." On the road he carries a stereo machine and enlivens bus and plane trips with his music. "You got to have rhythm" chirps Alvin. On the mound, McBean is anything but rhythmic. He makes so many quick moves before he pitches, Pasadena Independent Star News Sports Editor Joe Hendrickson has handed him a natural title: "Jumping McBean."

PETE MIKKELSEN — (Mick) — If Pete Mikkelsen hadn't been such a capable reliever last season, he might have returned to the ranks of starting pitchers when Don Drysdale retired. But skipper Walt Alston likes to keep a strong bullpen. "You use a reliever in a start and you lose him for four or five days," said the Dodger manager in explaining his decision not to go to Mikkelsen. Pete had been a highly capable starter for Tulsa, in the Cardinal system, in 1968 but he has spent much of his career trudging in from the bullpen. Pete's contract had been owned by the Yankees, Pirates, Cubs and Cards before the Dodgers landed him in a straight swap for a minor league pitcher, Jim Ellis. Control was Pete's biggest problem as he wandered from town to town in the lower minors. He credits Rube Walker, the ex-Dodger catcher now on the Mets coaching staff, with a change in pitching style which turned Pete toward the majors. Walker managed Pete at Augusta where a 1.47 earned run average sent him to the Yankees and into the 1964 World Series. When the Dodgers were in the thick of the pennant battle in August and September, Mikkelsen was at his best. From August 24 through September 21, he came out of the bullpen ten times without giving up an earned run. His 2.78 earned run average for the year was the best he had accomplished in the majors.

JOE MOELLER — (Skeeter) — One of the candidates for the No. 4 starting berth with the Dodgers this season is Joe Moeller. Joe started four times last year and the Dodgers won three of the games he opened. In April he went 6 1/3 innings against the Padres and was credited with a 2-to-1 win. In July he allowed the Braves only two runs in eight innings but the Dodgers didn't win it until the ninth. Joe was battered by the Giants his next time out and in his final start (in September) the Dodgers finally won, 3 to 2, in the twelfth by which time Joe had been shaved and showered. A bright prospect when he was signed for a hefty bonus in 1961, Joe moved from Reno to Greenville to Spokane in his first season. Sundry injuries and lack of his early sharp control kept him on the Spokane-Los Angeles shuttle much of his career. His best year with the Dodgers was in 1966 when he started, pitched long and short relief and finished with a 2.51 earned run average. Skipper Walt Alston commended Joe for handling "the toughest job you can give a pitcher." In the '68 stretch Joe, up from Spokane again, was a major contributor to the Dodgers' late-season splurge. There are many who believe Joe can win consistently in the majors if pitched in regular rotation — and, among those believers: Joe Moeller.

MANNY MOTA — (Mickey or Pee Wee) — One of the most startling mid-season deals of 1969 sent Ron Fairly and Paul Popovich to Montreal and brought Maury Wills and Manny Mota to the Dodgers. Manny, batting .318 for the Expos but, hampered by an elbow which had undergone surgery during the Winter, was a welcome surprise. For the Dodgers he hit .322 and, until late in the year when the elbow hurt badly, Mota was very much in the running for the batting crown of the National League — if he could play enough games. He finally had to give in to the pain and last Winter, in his native Santo Domingo, was under doctor's orders to rest the arm. Manny goes into the 1970 season with a lifetime batting average only three points shy of .300 and he has batted well over .300 in three of his last four campaigns. Manny doesn't go for distance. He believes in making hits. He hit safely in the first ten games he started for the Dodgers. He was hitting .374 for them as late as July 9, putting together a three-game splurge of eleven hits against the Braves. He made one other contribution to the Dodgers. After watching Manny at bat, Willie Davis became convinced he (Davis) was using a., the wrong bat and b., the wrong style. Willie changed both and went on to his finest year.

FRED NORMAN — (Top Cat) — Fred Norman was on the Albuquerque roster at Vero Beach last Spring when he had a chance to work a game against Spokane. After a sharp performance against the triple-A Indians Norman was told he had just won a ticket to the Northwest. More specifically, to Spokane. A veteran left-hander with major league experience, Norman worked as both a starter and in relief for Spokane and compiled a 13-6 record and 2.62 earned run average. He was rewarded by being named to the PCL all-star team and, more important, gaining a spot on the Dodgers' 40-man roster. "Pitching in the majors was my greatest thrill," says Freddie. "That's where I want to be." Although he has spent part of five seasons in the majors with Kansas City and the Chicago Cubs, his work totaled only 15 games. Norman could be the lefthander the Dodgers are looking for to help scouthpaw Jim Brewer in the bullpen.

CLAUDE OSTEEN — (Gomer) — A long-sought goal was achieved by Claude Osteen in his final outing of 1969. Beating the Houston Astros, he became a 20-game winner. Gomer had won seventeen in both 1966 and 1967 and in the latter year seemed assured of joining the 20-game Golden Circle when he was the first major leaguer to win eleven games. But he won only six of his last twenty starts that year. The 1969 season also was Claude's best in the earned run department — 2.66 and his seven shutouts (second in the National League to Juan Marichal's eight) was another personal high. Osteen had twelve wins and a 2.80 earned run average before the All-Star Game but wasn't selected for the N.L. team. Walt Alston terms Claude one of the most consistent pitchers he has managed — "he rarely pitches a bad ball game." Osteen tied Bill Singer in complete games (16) and in only one of his wins did he allow more than three runs. He was tagged for five (one unearned) by the Expos as he won, 9 to 5. Claude might have been a 20-game winner much earlier than his final start with a bit of luck. He gave up one run in nine innings against the Cubs but the Dodgers didn't win until the twelfth. He went nine against the Padres and the Dodgers lost in thirteen. He limited the Giants to two runs in nine but the Dodgers lost in fourteen. On another occasion the Dodgers beat the Giants, 2 to 1, in eleven after Osteen held them to a run for nine. He hurled 9 innings eighteen times and eight or more six additional times. In ten of his fifteen defeats the Dodgers scored 0, 1 or 2 runs.

TOM PACIOREK — (Wimpie) — The University of Houston baseball team was runner-up to Arizona State in 1967 and 1968 and one of the major factors was the hitting of Tom Paciorek. He batted .435 in 1967 and .364 in 1968, winning Sporting News Collegiate All-America honors in both years. He's now trying to win a job on the Dodger varsity after batting .318 with 15 homers and 53 runs batted in at Bakersfield last year. A three-year baseball veteran of the U. of Houston, Paciorek holds almost every major batting record at the university — best lifetime average (.375), most home runs (20), most runs (87), most stolen bases (37), most total bases (228), most doubles (22) and most games played (93). But baseball wasn't his only sport. Tom was a defensive halfback on the Houston football team and was drafted on the ninth round by the Miami Dolphins. In 1967 Paciorek was on the Houston team which upset Michigan State.

WES PARKER — (Tiger) — As the major leaguers took time out for the All-Star Game last season Wes Parker had his finest season rolling along. He was hitting .296. He was well on his way to his third successive Golden Glove as the classiest first baseman in the National League. He had made a dozen hits in his last seven games, including two doubles, a triple and two homers, and he had driven in nine runs in that span. The Dodgers were only a game behind the first-place Atlanta Braves in the Western Division and Wes was one of the big reasons they were there. Then, misfortune, in the form of a balky appendix, struck him down in Chicago and Wes was rushed to the hospital for surgery. Placed on the disabled list, Parker made a rapid recovery and in mid-August picked up where he left off with five hits, including two doubles, his first three games back in action. His batting average moved over the .300 mark and, as Wes continued to sock with authority, the Dodgers moved into first place and pennant fever took over in Los Angeles. But the rigors of the year finally took their toll on Wes and he (and the Dodgers) had their troubles down the stretch. Nevertheless, 1969 was Parker's finest season. He drove in more winning runs and scored more than any Dodger. And, with only sixteen errors in his last four campaigns at first base, he had another Golden Glove in his collection.

JOSE PENA — When the Dodgers drafted pitcher Jose Pena (Gutierrez) at the winter meetings they paid the standard fee of $25,000. Three hours later a Mexican League team offered the Dodgers $35,000 for Pena. Vice-president Al Campanis turned down the offer and with good reason. The Dodgers believed they had pulled off the best deal of the winter meetings in drafting Pena. A veteran of nine professional seasons, mostly in the Mexican League, Pena was impressive with Cincinnati last Spring but was shipped to Indianapolis just before the start of the N.L. season. Recalled by the Reds during the summer, Jose pitched in six major league games and obviously was nervous. He also was upset when a spectator in Chicago threw a ball which struck him in the face. Pena sustained a broken nose. He was even more upset when the Reds shipped him to Indianapolis and Jose moved to Reynosa in the Mexican League. Remaining the property of the Reds, Jose showed his happiness at being back in the Mexican League by recording an 11-5 record and 1.35 earned run average. Pena was scouted in Mexican Winter League play by Ray Perry, who reported "This fellow has a major league arm and can either start or work in relief." Said veteran observer Frank Lane: "The only thing Pena needs is confidence and a real good opportunity to make a major league club. He has the arm." The Dodgers will give him the opportunity.

SERGIO ROBLES — When Sergio Robles (Valenzuela) was purchased by the Dodgers in October of 1967 he couldn't speak a word of English. But the Dodgers understood one thing — they had a real prospect as a catcher. Robles has spent his first two seasons in the U.S. with Bakersfield, batting .273 in 1968 and .270 last season. He improved his RBI production by 20 to 51 last season. Robles is a willing student and figures to improve with additional instruction. "When I first saw his batting style I couldn't believe it," says Dixie Walker. "He dropped his bat back like Gil McDougald and then did a little twirl with it. But he made a few corrections and was able to get his bat in good position. This is a fellow we must watch closely because he has potential."

BILL RUSSELL — (Young Blood or Super-Rook) — Tabbed as "Super-Rook" by his teammates, Bill Russell hopes to make that title an alliterative "Super-Soph" in 1970 — and he may be doing it at a new position. All year long as the kid from Kansas was playing the outfield for the Dodgers he was working out, before games, as an infielder. After the season was completed he joined the Winter Instructional League and Tom Lasorda and scout Monty Basgall continued his tutoring in that direction. At the end of Arizona play no one had any doubt Russell could play the infield but there was some controversy whether he looked better at third base or short. He was scheduled for a lot of both in Spring training. Russell, one of the fastest and smoothest runners the Dodgers have owned in some time, showed early-season authority at the plate. He broke into the majors with a pinch double off Jim Merritt and, in his first full game, got three hits, including a triple and homer. He went into May with a .300-plus average and won the right to stay with the "big club" all year. Russell, who reached his 21st birthday after his first year in the majors, had played only as high as A-Ball in the minors, hitting .280 at Bakersfield in 1968. Signed at a tryout camp in his native Pittsburg, Kan., Russell came out of a school which didn't even have a baseball team. So Bill won Kansas MVP honors in basketball, instead.

BILL SINGER — (Sing-Sing or Billy No-No) — Bidding to become one of the top pitchers in baseball, Bill Singer passed his 20-victory milestone early in his career — his third season as a major league regular. Bill won No. 20 his last time out, beating Houston, 5 to 4, after four unsuccessful thrusts at that plateau. Third in strikeouts behind Fergie Jenkins and Bob Gibson and seventh on the National League ERA list, Bill tied Claude Osteen in complete games (at 16). Singer pitched 316 innings and was topped among the Dodgers only by Osteen. Bill had a great shot at the N.L. earned run crown until he tired down the stretch. After a shutout win over the Braves Sept. 8, Singer had an average of 2.01. Bill took part in four shutouts but needed relief help in two. In another game, against the Mets, he hurled a magnificent two-hitter for nine innings but the Dodgers lost that one in the fifteenth, 1 to 0. Only Dodger in the 1969 All-Star game, Singer fired the fifth and sixth innings and retired Rod Carew, Reggie Jackson, Paul Blair, Boog Powell, Reggie Smith and Sal Bando in rapid succession. Singer, a Pomona High grad, was asked, in 1967, to fill a rather important set of spikes when he replaced Sandy Koufax in the Dodger rotation. He has done remarkably well in the three campaigns since the Dodgers' great southpaw retired, winning 12, 13, 20, compiling earned run averages of 2.65, 2.88 and 2.34 and fanning 169, 227 and 247 batters. That's in the Koufax mold and, at twenty-five years of age, Bill's 45 wins in the majors put him nine ahead of Sandy. Now, all Bill has to do is keep pace with the 18, 14, 25, 19, 26, 27 Sandy accomplished in his next six seasons.

TED SIZEMORE — (Pee Wee, Runt or Sizey) — The highlight of Ted Sizemore's first year in the majors was, of course, his selection by the Baseball Writers of America as 1969 Rookie of the Year. There were, however, many dramatic episodes enroute to that award. He had been a so-so catching prospect in the Dodger farm system, driven to the outfield in Spokane (1968) by an injury. Then there was the decision to give Ted (in Arizona Instructional play) a trial as a second baseman. Next, his former manager in the Pacific Coast League (Roy Hartsfield) insisted Ted was good enough to play shortstop — so he opened the season for the Dodgers at that position. Along came the Maury Wills-from-Montreal trade and it was back to second for Ted. Then there was a little publicized bit of coaching by Dixie Walker in which the one-time most popular of all Brooklyn Dodgers warned Sizemore to stop pulling for the fences and concentrate on making contact between his bat and the pitched ball. And Sizemore took it from there to a fine first year. He had won the Dearie Mulvey Award as the outstanding prospect in Spring training. He was the No. 1 vote-getter on the Topps All-Rookie team. He played more games than any Dodger. And, when twenty-four baseball writers selected the top Rookie of 1969 in the National League, little Ted got fourteen of the votes. Ted was asked to bat in various spots in Walt Alston's line-up but whether he batted second, sixth, seventh or eighth, he was effective. In one stretch, August 10 through September 1, he made 30 hits in 72 times at bat (a .417 average over twenty games) and that stretch just about clinched Rookie honors for him. Ted hit four home runs, which wasn't expected of him, but he had another specialty — bases-loaded triples. He hit three of them during his brilliant 1969 campaign. Wonder what he has in mind for an encore?

BOB STINSON — (Scrap Iron) — When Bob Stinson was called up from Spokane in September of last season he and his wife received an invitation to live with the Claude Osteens. "I wanted to get to know him better," said Claude. "After all, he was going to be catching for us." And so who was the catcher when Claude won his 20th game on Oct. 1? Why, it was Bob Stinson. And the young catcher came back the next night as Bill Singer won his 20th in the final Dodger game of the year. Stinson scored the winning run in the bottom of the ninth on a wild pitch as he plowed into home plate. Stinson played in four games for the Dodgers, collecting three hits in eight at-bats for a .375 mark with two RBIs. Stinson played on the Dodgers' team in Arizona last winter but for the first time in three years he wasn't undergoing a major change. In the winter of 1967 he was converted from an outfielder and in 1968 he changed from a righthanded batter to a switch hitter. He batted .281 at Spokane last season and slugged six homers, three from each side. Stinson had been an All-America catcher for Miami Dade Junior College but became an outfielder in his first year of pro ball in 1966. Stinson has an outstanding throwing arm and led PCL catchers with a .989 fielding average last season.

MIKE STRAHLER — (Thin Man) — Mike Strahler, at age 22, figures most of his tough luck in baseball is behind him. "Mike was bothered by a sore arm part of last season but there were times when he showed flashes of his 1968 form," says Spokane manager Tommy Lasorda. In 1968 Mike won seven games for Spokane with a 2.30 earned run average. He notched eight wins last season but his ERA was 4.31. The Dodgers had drafted Mike from the Philadelphia Phillies' organization after the 1967 season and his 15 wins in two seasons of Triple-A baseball proves the move was worthwhile. After pitching his Sacramento American Legion team to the state finals in 1965 with a 9-0 record, Mike was signed by the Phillies. Following his first pro season at Spartanburg, S.C., Mike had to undergo an operation to have his right kidney removed. "I really wasn't sure if I would be able to pitch again," recalls Mike. But Strahler, minus one kidney, still is pitching. And the Dodgers figure his good luck is yet to come.

BILL SUDAKIS — (Suds or Sudsy) — Another of the unusual experiments which have studded Dodger history will be attempted in 1970 when Bill Sudakis will try to make the change from third base to duty behind the plate. "Suds" gave it a whirl at the urging of Tom Lasorda during Arizona Instructional League play and, in its first chapter, the trial met with great success. Bill came up from Albuquerque, of the Texas League, in 1968 and broke in brilliantly as a Dodger. He hit a home run in his first big league game, was hitting .444 after a week of action and had a grand slammer to his credit. Sudakis had been the co-winner of MVP honors in the Texas League and his .363 average in Arizona that Winter put him in a spot to nail down third base with the Dodgers for some time to come. Now, in the ever-changing Dodger picture, he finds himself wearing a mitt, pads and a face mask. During 1969, Sudakis had a notable batting streak of eighteen games, the longest Dodgers' until Willie Davis put together a 31-game skein. Sudakis kept his batting string alive the hard way with home runs in games Nos. 1, 7, 13, 15, 16, 17 and 18. A virus infection sidelined him shortly thereafter and the Dodgers missed his authoritative bat down the stretch.

DON SUTTON — (Sut or Elmer) — Ninth in the league in strikeouts (215), and topped only by Ferguson Jenkins in starts (41), Don Sutton came close to joining Bill Singer and Claude Osteen as a 3rd 20-game winner on the same staff last year — and certainly has that potential in 1970. Don scored his fifteenth victory August 15 but was able to pick up only two more the rest of the way. Much earlier (June 23) he had an 11-and-5 record when he won seven out of eight in a month (May 24th through June 23). He lost four straight, including two Dodger shutouts and blew his chances of being selected for the National League All-Star team. Adding a knuckle ball to his repertory during the year, Sutton was particularly effective against the Braves (3-0), Pirates (2-0) and Phillies (2-0) — for ten of his victories. On May 1 he fired a 1-hit shutout against the Giants at Candlestick Park with a double to left by Jim Davenport ruining his bid for a no-hitter after one out in the eighth. He put together successive shutouts against the Cards and Expos in late May and had four during the year. Don still was in range of a 20-win season as he went into the final fortnight of the campaign but successive 2-1 defeats by the Reds and Giants frustrated that hope.

JEFF TORBORG — (Rudy Rutgers) — Rated one of baseball's finest receivers, Jeff Torborg still is looking for the chance to become a regular catcher — with the Dodgers or some other club. Jeff doesn't relish sitting on the sidelines while others do the bulk of the mitt-and-mask duty. Behind John Roseboro and Tom Haller, however, he has been asked to do a minimum of work. Last year was a sample of Jeff's frustration. As late as mid-June he was batting .370 but he had been up to the plate in only a dozen games (30 at-bats). He wasn't to see a great deal more action thereafter, either, for his 124 times at bat represented one of his lighter years. Torborg contends (and he has plenty of support) that you just can't expect a man to come up with much of a batting average in so few games. Jeff, a graduate of Rutgers, has been on the Dodger roster since 1964 after a brief tune-up at Albuquerque. His biggest thrill was catching Sandy Koufax's fourth no-hit, no-run game (a Perfecto against the Cubs in 1965) but close behind that achievement was serving as batterymate to Don Drysdale in Game No. 5 of his six straight shutouts (and 56⅓ inning streak) in 1968. Jeff probably would trade them both in just to become a regular catcher.

BOBBY VALENTINE — Bobby Valentine is a graduate of Rippowan High and if that sounds like something out of a fiction book, well, read on. He scored 53 touchdowns in high school and was All-Connecticut for three years. He received 250 college scholarship offers but he turned them down to sign with the Dodgers after being their No. 1 selection in the Spring draft of 1968. Rushing off to Ogden and pro baseball the day after he was graduated from high school, Bobby was selected the league's best centerfielder. Converted to a shortstop in spring training of 1969, Bobby played shortstop for Spokane last season and hit 19 doubles, 5 triples, 3 homers and drove in 35 runs while stealing 34 bases. He finished the year with the Dodgers and although he didn't have an official at-bat he scored three runs. He has attended classes at both USC and Arizona State. And he is 19 years old. Valentine, blessed with great speed, has always been ahead of his class. He was a four-year letterman in baseball and football at Old Rippowan in Stamford, Conn., and when he was a 15-year-old sophomore he scored 22 touchdowns to lead his team to the state football championship. Just for fun, Bobby ran indoor track in high school. He won the state championship in the 60-yard dash (6.3) and also in the 330 (32.1) as a senior. In May of his senior year he signed a letter of intent to attend USC. But then came the June draft of 1968 and the Trojans' loss was the Dodgers' gain.

SANDY VANCE — (Dazzy) — Sandy Vance never will forget his first meeting with Don Drysdale. It took place last Spring near a practice field at Dodgertown. Noting the ragged condition of Vance's shoes, Drysdale inquired "Who gave you those — Ty Cobb?" Sandy blushed. "What size shoe do you wear?" asked Drysdale. Informed the size, Big D departed for a few minutes to the Dodger clubhouse and returned with a new pair of shoes. "Here, try these on," said the veteran as he handed the shoes to Vance. Don Drysdale has left the Dodger scene. Sandy Vance is one of those pitchers being counted on to fill Big D's shoes. Vance got a late start last Spring as he was finishing work on a bachelor of arts degree in political science at Stanford University and his lack of pitching was reflected in a slow start at Spokane. He lost three of his first seven starts without gaining a win. It was June before he won his first game but he won five games in August and finished the season with a 6-6 record. Sandy was a standout at Pasadena High School and had a 27-3 record in three years at Stanford. In his first year of pro ball he was 14-3 at Ogden and recorded 150 strikeouts in 118 innings.

MAURY WILLS — (Mouse or Mousey) — No trade the Dodgers have made in years proved more popular than the Los Angeles-Montreal deal which brought Maury Wills back to the Coast. When Maury was honored as the "Centennial Celebrity" at one of the Dodgers' games play had to be held up as the fans gave Maury a standing ovation. A .297 batter with the Dodgers last year, he was brilliant at short and the team began to jell once he re-donned his Dodger uniform. Maury, of course, had gained his tremendous popularity with some sensational campaigns in pennant years — 1959, 1963, 1965 and 1966. He was the spark which ignited the Dodgers' '59 flag chase with a great series against the Giants. He brought base-stealing back into baseball's spotlight when he led the National League six straight years and set an all-time major league record with an amazing 104 thefts in 1962. Although he didn't get into the "biggs" until he had kicked around the minors for ten years, he has stolen 542 bases and was still fleet enough to grab forty last year. Now the dean of the Dodgers, Maury began his career as a pitcher but gave it up after three years. The Detroit Tigers had him on a "look" basis one season and returned him to the Dodgers. It was the all-time baseball snub but the Dodgers aren't kicking. In his earlier seasons with the Dodgers, Maury was named Player of the Year and National League MVP in 1962, shortstop on the Sporting News N.L. All-Star teams of 1961-62-65 and Golden Glove winner in 1961-62.
